

Acknowledgements

This project would not have been successful without the assistance of several people. Mary-Rose MacColl played a key role in the research and writing the report. Cheryl Matthews worked tirelessly to locate and interview sole operator sex workers, and Shirley-Ann Johnston was invaluable in finalising our research towards the end of the project. Finally, and most importantly, we wish to thank everyone who spoke to us about their experiences in the sex industry – without your insight we would have very little to say.

Disclaimer

This report has been prepared using information provided by the stakeholders contacted through the project. Anne Edwards has relied on that information being accurate. Anne Edwards has not undertaken any audit or other forms of testing to verify the accuracy, completeness, or reasonableness of the information provided. Accordingly, Anne Edwards can accept no responsibility for any errors or omissions in the information shown in this report where it is based on that information provided.

This report is based on a series of individual interviews conducted with stakeholders identified by the Prostitution Licensing Authority. Anne Edwards has relied upon those stakeholders as providing a complete and representative view of information.

This report has been prepared at the request of the Prostitution Licensing Authority in accordance with the terms of Anne Edwards's engagement contract dated 1 August 2008 and the amendment to the contract dated 22 October 2008.
